

Why would you want to not forgive

The fifth stanza of Our word (O. Župančič) is perfect for this drop, which is another step on the path of brightening.

Pride, character and honor, counterfeit money, who can tell the true nature of a man from a fake one.
Do you know whose palm you reached out to, confidentially?
Tonight, this night, with a kiss you will be betrayed!
The Father is gone, the Son is gone, and the spirit with us has no voice.

Why would you rather not forgive? Because you would rather understand and there would be no need to forgive. Humans are on the verge of something great, even though this greatness is as easy for us as it is for birds to fly. It just seems tiring, but it's not. Thus, the inner attitude discussed here may seem more difficult to achieve than it really is.

The situation in which there is a need to forgive arises from the opinion that someone has done something to you that you consider bad. He did something that hurt you and he should regret it, make amends. Forgiveness is necessary when you judge. The one who judges is the selfishness in you, who knows nothing about the justice of Life and the infallibility of God's work. For godless thought, man is the author of Happening, he does not have the Intelligence of the Source from which to know the energetic justice of the Natural Law. Selfishness makes you think you are better and judge righteously, it will not allow you to see yourself as you really are, so it turns you away from you.

The act of forgiveness is not necessary when there is no one to judge. Without a judge, you live in Understanding, which unfolds to you the knowledge that what is happening is a fair reflection of yourself, and often also of a wider, collective karma. This allows you to come up with completely new and creative responses to the discomforts you are experiencing. Selfishness is blind to what is, it exists in the interpretation of the Happening, it does not exist in the Happening, selfishness does not exist in the Presence. For a long time, people obey godless thought, and we really do not know how to do anything other than being unconsciously reactive to the impulses of circumstances, including thought. We have become sophisticated multipliers of darkness and we don't know it.

The mind (ego, godless thought, self-righteousness, selfishness, sense of personal doing, AI program, death..., don't be fooled by the variety of names) knows that it is not the creator, but it cannot accept it. It can't bear the thought of having nothing to do with the Happening. Understand, in relation to yourself and to others, that the mind will not give up the illusion it creates that it can reign: rather a ruler in hell than a servant in Heaven. The ego will not allow you to be convinced of the Beauty of surrendering to God's doing by being present, it immediately jumps in front of the screen of your attention and serves you shrewd conclusions to drive you reactionary to rejection. Truly, the ego cannot understand the logic of Life, but the heart can.

Kindness and perseverance in domesticating with the Living thought will bear fruit. It will network you again and again with High Logic, so that it becomes natural again and does not require any effort. It starts with you not being in the you. Feel the relief when you let go of the idea of 'I do', 'I know', 'it belongs to me', etc.. Feel the comfort when you trustfully wrap yourself in God's arms, that you are finally home and safe. Even if you have not yet been given the opportunity to experience High Surrender, upon your first contact with It you will be embraced by a familiar familiarity and the pressure of 'being left to yourself' will immediately ease.

It helps if you don't take yourself too seriously. Relax with yourself and your blackness. How could it be otherwise? We're here because we need root cleaning, all of us. Just beware of cowardice that refuses to admit it. From the weakness of non-awareness you have become weak and small things seem big to you. A merciless dictator who is given power over your Life and who delights in inflicting pain is a puny torturer compared to the selfish thought you allow to rule your understanding.

The Law of Life operates at the level of electrical impulses, there is no denying it, no evasion, no mistakes and no jumping over hurdles in what you have to experience and accept for the sense of 'personal doing' to collapse within you. No one escapes himself. You can procrastinate and wallow, but we all have to walk this path. If you knew what you were agreeing to when you obeyed the program, the vision itself would do its job of clarification.

All that remains is saving Power and raising the threshold of tolerance. Apparent horrors will no longer seem so terrible to you and, once again in the Power, you will see them for what they really are, like the annoying bzzzzzzzzzz of mosquitoes that only annoys you, no longer prompting you to act unlovingly. Life has its own Order, which is not shaken by judgment, judgement only undermines you.

Alone, without an understanding of God's Doing, you remain thrown at the mercy of the millstones of mental unconsciousness, you attribute the authorship of the Events to yourself and others, and you grind to dust, when at the same time you do not know that you are doing it. This is really scary. I feel for you if you are here.

I was also here, it was boiling inside me, the pain was making me sick. But I had someone who helped me kept the violence tied up in inaction. I felt like I was buried alive. I was not allowed to move from what I would, to say nothing back, only to nod, to bear the ugliness that, without God, I could not be prepared for. And it crushed me. It is right that it did. What was crushed was the fragile ego that hindered the fusion with God. Despite all of this, I had to be grateful for this mess, for cleaning was happening. The attitude that neither you, nor other people, could do anything, if God's infallibility was not behind the work of man, relaxes you thoroughly. If we knew how many things we want, but they do not happen, we would get a clearer insight into the Wisdom, Providence and Grace of God's Doing.

It doesn't happen overnight. I cried, huddled against the trees, lit a fire, prayed, drummed, sang, danced, got drunk on it, more than once to keep the violence at bay, to not hit back, to show who was who and to take justice into my own hands. I tell you truly that I would rather be drunk a hundred times than commit wickedness once and expell myself from the circle of God. You will realize that it is incomparably more favorable to receive evil than to inflict it. Therefore, don't feel sorry for yourself, don't defend yourself, stand calmly on your feet, wipe the dust from your feet, cling to God and step on the path of Love.

Beginnings are always difficult because the weight of darkness is even greater than the light weight of Light. Everywhere you turn, you see no exit. Above all, there is also physical weakness, fatigue, illnesses and all kinds of pain, which are natural companions of doing and experiencing low energies. But I assure you it will pass.

Again I reassure you not to be afraid. Make peace with yourself, making peace with others will follow effortlessly. Take a deep breath, place your hands on your heart and stomach and exhale with relief into complete relaxation of mental silence. In it, realize that you are beautiful and loved, that there is no one who can and could judge you. Allow the silence to tune you to a higher Understanding, trust God's Doing. Everything is in the best order, stop trying to save yourself. Descend from the head into the heart and rest in it from now on. Your new task is tranquility, it is resting in God, it is inaction from Understanding, it is stopping the wild horses of reactivity, it is nurturing inner silence... .

The only Reality that embraces you from resting in God is the high and melodious sound of Love, Understanding and Power. Now you no longer feel the need to forgive, because you see only God and his Loving maneuvers. Trust that you will be given Strength and Wisdom so that the weight of the trial does not spin you into a loop of self-destruction.

Indulge in only the highest spirits and don't consider anything other people do. Your friendship with God makes you untouchable by the dark hunters. Do not step out of His circle even for a second. This is the mission of souls that draws them to the Light. This is your Eternal Radiance.
